HARBOR PROJECT WILL STIMULATE PAYROLLS HERE

All Lines of Industry Will Prosper If Improvement Bonds Go Through

Impressed with the fact that port development is the only answer to the cry for industries and payrolls to bring relief on the tax load, peninsulans have widely endorsed the proposed San Mateo County Harbor project.

Two indications of the interest came this week with a visit on Tuesday to the Stockton harbor project by a group of civic leaders headed by Colonel Charles N. Kirkbride of San Mateo, while laast night (Thursday) the Burlingame City Hall was wellfilled as Colonel B. C. Allin, internationally known port authority, told of the vital importance of harbor development on the lower San Francisco bay.

Voters on August 28 will be asked to approve a $460,000 bond issue to make the county harbor project in Redwood Creek an actuality. The dertaken since 1882, is now threeharbor, through federal projects unfourths completed without expense to the taxpayers.

Ocean freighters now actually visit the port, but the commerce of the harbor is hindered because of the wait on the tides and the lack of public port facilities. The $460,000 bond issue, to which the federal government will add $203,000 in outright gifts, will provide a $663,000 project.

Army and private engineers who have looked into the Redwood Harbor project declared it sound. The army engineers previously have approved some $75,000 in expenditures and now are adding $203,000 more.

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is "heartily in favor of the San Mateo County Harbor," and feels "it will develope the resourses of San Mateo County."

"If San Mateo county is to enjoy the progress of other counties it should have a definite policy of harbor development," Congressman Richard J. Welch, San Francisco, declares, and adds, "the future of the peninsula depends upon it."

Congressman John J. McGrath, pointing to the vast barren waterfront and the need of dong something about it, says: "we have 50,000 acres of potential industrial land valued at $10 per acre. The man who owns a small home assessed at $1000 pays as high a tax as the man who owns a hundred acres of industrial land. These lands must be made valuable by making it possible for industries to use them."

On this point the San Carlos Enquirer says: "It seems feasible to

STATE RECORD REGISTRATION IS ESTABLISHED

Democrats Have Increased Numbers Since New Deal Beginning

Owing to the great revival in registrations throughout the state, a record smashing electorate of 3,062,317 voters has now qualified to cast ballots at the August 28 primary.

Official registration figures, as announced by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, showed this division of the major parties:

Democrats, 1,494,111.
Republicans, 1,418,826.

Compared with the last partisan statewide election, the party of the New Deal showed a gain of 332,629 in registrations, while Republicans dropped 146,438 from their figure of November 8, 1932.

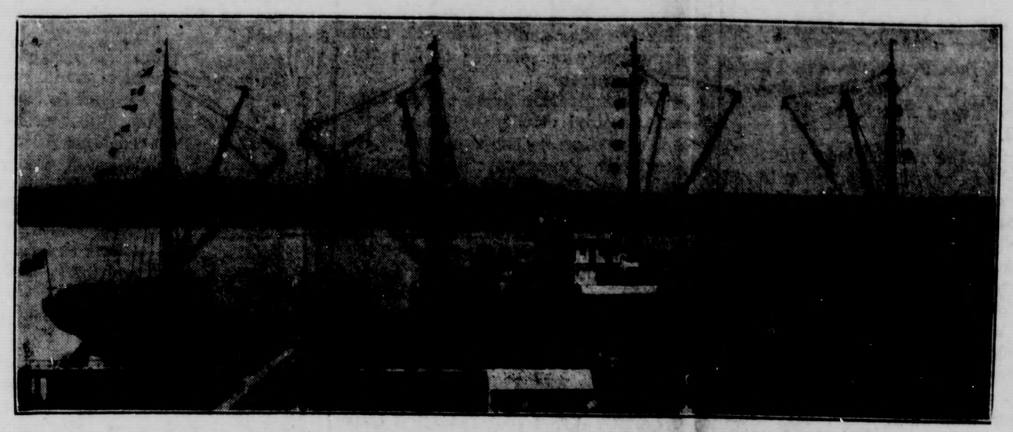
During the last forty-five days total state registrations increased by 7[illegible]2,185.

CANADA GOLD RUSH LIKELY

Another great gold rush, rivaling, possibly, those which made history in California and the Yukon years ago, was visualized by mining men following the receipt of wireless reports from the Great Bear Lake region of the Northwest Territories that prospectors have recently made a sensational strike on the Yellow Knife River.

The strike was said to have been made by a party of Indians directed by Major Lockie Burwash, the noted Canadian geologist and explorer.

TIED UP TO DOCK IN REDWOOD HARBOR



Here is a freighter tied up to the cement company docks in Redwood Harbor. Ships of this type are forced to wait on the tides because the existing 20-foot depth is insufficient. The $460,000 bond issue on August 28 will dredge the channel to 27 feet and provide port facilities for use of the public. The federal government will aid to the extent of $203,000.

County Board Considering Tentative $3,300,000 Setup

Greater Cost For Elections, Relief and Bonds May Force Estimates Up

A tentative budget of approximately $3.300,000 was submitted to the County Board of Supervisors at their meeting Monday by Controller Edward M. Stack for their consideration.

The estimate includes an item of $397,867.68 for unemployment relief and delinquent bond redemption, permission for which must be obtained from the state board of equalization before the sum can be inserted in the program.

The controller's budget is made up of: (1) estimated requirements of the basic governmental functions; (2) anticipated requirements for school maintenance, derived from state sources; (3) an item of $128,026.80 for redemption of delinquent 1915 improvement bonds; (4) an item of $269,841 for unemployment relief; (5) a tentative item of $85,000 covering election costs, included in the general fund estimate.

On the basis of these requirements, expenditures for 1934-35 would be about $400,000 in excess of last year's expenditures.

However, it was explained the board probably will slash the budget items as submitted, thereby resulting in a much lower figure than estimated.

Members of the board denounced published statements that the county taxpayers will be faced with an appreciable increase in the tax rate over last year.

Stack joined the board in its denunciation, saying the statements were "political propaganda designed to mislead the public."

Dr. Thompson, chairman of the board, said the supervisors had not yet taken up the budget pruning, and added that even before the expected cuts requests for the various departments this year on the whole are less

SERA ASKED TO FURNISH MONEY FOR LIFE GUARDS

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors have asked SERA to advance funds for the empolyment of life guards on the county's ocean beaches.

As there is considerable swimming done on the coastside beaches, and an occasional life is lost, the provision for safeguarding lives of swimmers by having life guards constantly on the job is considered a vital one.

The action was taken by the board on motion of Supervisor A. J. Witt of this district and was heartily endorsed by the other members of the board.

Past Presidents' Club Meets

Mrs. Hattie Kelly and Mrs. Christine Hume entertained the members of the Past Presidents Club of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, N.D.G.W. on Friday evening August 10 at the home of Mrs. Hume on Miriam street.

The feature of the evening was the reporting by Mrs. Matilda Heeringa and Mrs. Irene Moresco on their recent very interesting trip to the Hawaiian Islands.

Those in attendance were: Mesdames Mary May, Fredereka Volkman, Camille Benassini, Anne Biggio, Alice Anderson, Matilda Heeringa, Irene Moresco, Rena Mathias, Alice Oldham, Hattie Kelly and Christine Hume.

INTERESTING MEETING OF OUR CITY FATHERS

Discuss Supervised Play on City School Grounds for Elementary Children

The regular meeting of the Daly City Council was called to order Monday evening at 8 o'clock with Mayor Smith presiding.

The roll call noted all members in their seats—Councilmen Selmi, Sunderman, Fahy, Smith. The assistant engineer and city attorney were also present.

In the absence of City Clerk Ross, Councilman Sundermann was appointed to act as clerk.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

A communication from the San Mateo Council, American Legion, convention committee invited the members of the city council to visit convention headquarters and enjoy the hospitality of the Legion.

A communication from the Board of Fire Commissioners, recommending a change in the present fire ordinance, was referred to the ordinance committee.

A communication from M. Fleishhacker, owner of a parcel of land at the corner of School street and Junipero Serra boulevard, requested that the land be classified as business property. The matter was referred to the city planning committee.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOL BOARD HOLDS MEETING

Asks Officers and Members Parent Teacher Units to Discuss Vital Matter

The Board of Trustees of the Jefferson School District met Wednesday evening for the purpose of discussing plans with the presidents and members of the various city units of the P. T. A. regarding the year's program.

The meeting was held in the Manual Arts building of the Woodrow Wilson School and was presided over by Geo. R. Augustine, president of the board.

The purpose of the meeting was to form an organization to promote the passage of the school bonds for three new schools, so as to receive the advantage of the federal load and grant.

It was decided to invite all other civic organizations to participate in this movement.

It was also decided that the newly formed organization would hold weekly meetings every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Although the meeting was informed a communication had been sent to the board from the City Council requesting the use of the school grounds for supervised play on Saturdays and holidays, no action could be officially taken by the board because the communication had not yet been received by the latter body.

PUPILS PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO AMERICAN FLAG

Enrollment at High School Largest for Opening Day Ever Recorded

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

This was the pledge taken by the pupils of the Jefferson Union High School on Monday morning as the first duty of the new school year. It was spoken in unison, led by the principal, as the entire student body and faculty stood erect and saluted the flag.

And it was no mere recital of words. Rather, it was Jefferson High's answer to the oft repeated statement that unamerican "isms" are being fostered in the schools of America. And the answer was spoken with such emphasis and in such volume of sincerity that it could not be denied.

The enrollment was the largest for the opening day in the history of the local high school—430 in all, of whom 111 were new students. It shows an increase in the number of students attending from each one of the schools in the high school district—Rockaway Beach, Salada Beach, Brisbane, Bayshore, Daly City and Colma.

Classes, especially in United States history, typing, algebra and English, have very heavy enrollments, and it is possible that additional sections will have to be formed. The enrollment in the classes in music is almost three times as great as it has ever been before, due, undoubtedly, to the employment of a full time instructor in band, orchestra and chorus.

Monday was only a half day session, as the students were dismissed for the afternoon to allow them to witness the parade of the American Legion in San Francisco.

Tuesday morning the regular class room sessions began at 8:15, and continued thereafter according to schedule. This was made possible through the preparation made by the principal and faculty before the close of last year. Information was collected concerning each prospective new student with the co-operation of the teachers in the several grammar schools of the district. In this way a program was prepared to fit the needs of each pupil, and the school program was arranged accordingly.

Textbooks were distributed with promptness through an organization of assistant librarians, and regular class recitations were assigned on Tuesday.

Principal James Ferguson called an assembly on Wednesday, at which time he expressed his appreciation of the co-operation given by the students in getting the classes organized so promptly. This is an indication, he said, that Jefferson High is going to have a most successful year in 1934-35.

Candidates' Whist

On Wednesday evening, August 22, Court St. Mary No. 1155, C. D. of A., and Knights of Columbus Council No. 2712 will hold a candidates' whist party.

The affair will be staged in Eagles Hall, Daly City, at 8:30 o'clock.

All citizens are invited to attend this affair. A fine suckling pig will be one of the prizes awarded. A good time is assured.

Members of Knights of Columbus Council No. 2712 are urged to remember the regular meeting on Tuesday evening, August 21, at 8:15 o'clock.

SILVER RELIEF MEASURES ASSIST WORLD RECOVERY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

Effective procedure on the part of the United States for the rehabilitation of silver has met with hearty approval of students of international conditions and the example of this country is likely to be followed in a number of other countries. Realization is keen that silver mining and the increased use of the white metal will act as a vital factor in bringing economic forces all over the globe back to an even keel.

A glance into the history of monetary affairs shows that silver has been used as money for upward of 60 per cent of the world's population for a long period. So it was a perfectly logical thing for an agreement to be made at the London Conference last year by important nations to "absorb" a certain amount of the metal for a stated time.

Take, for example, the Dominion of Canada, our sister nation to the north. The Canadians agreed to take 1,600,000 ounces of silver each year, and a few days ago the government at Ottawa was reported to have called for tenders for 250,000 ounces as the first step in carrying out of the agreement.

There is a movement, however, for the encouragement of silver mining on a much larger scale and it may be the Canadian powers will, before long, enter upon a comprehensive scheme somewhat similar to that of this country in paying 64½ cents an ounce for newly mined silver.

Prior to the nationalization of silver, a measure in itself of the greatest good, A. N. Wolverton, of Vancouver, characterized the United States Silver Purchase Act as perhaps the most important reconstructive legislation in modern times. Wolverton, who has made a deep study of the bearing of silver on the stability of the world, also said that it is almost inconceivable that Canada should fail to follow suit.

In developing his thought about Canada getting busy right away, Wolverton was quoted in the Vancouver Sun as saying:

"Canada is the third largest producer of silver in the world and British Columbia is a larger actual and potential producer than any other Canadian province.

"It should be entirely reasonable to expect British Columbia's silver production to mount to fifteen or twenty million ounces a year in the not distant future, with an assured market of 75 cents an ounce or upwards.

"The handwriting is on the wall. American national policy, which will be followed internationally in the early future, is such Canada should logically regain prosperity more rapidly than any other nation, and British Columbia more rapidly than some other parts of Canada.

"It is almost inconceivable that Canada, or any other nation, should fail to follow the United States in the adoption of a similar national policy with regard to silver, now that recognized leadership has been provided by the most important creditor nation in the world."

In the light of recent events, Canada, which was predicted some time ago by experts as likely to produce less silver this year than last year, will step along with the United States in producing appreciably more. Last year the country up north produced a bit more than 15,500,000 ounces.

Men of vision are concentrating at present on the East Kootenay section of British Columbia and vast development work is in the offing. The famous Sullivan mine, of the East Kootenay, in addition to its enormous output of lead and zinc, has produced almost 1,000,000 ounces of silver more in the first half of this year than last. The mine is famous the world over for its steady and almost fabulous production.

PARENT TEACHER MEETINGS HELD

Interesting Conferences To Be Called Pertaining To Parent Education

Mrs. F. M. Stanger, first vice president, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, held a conference at her home on Cypress Avenue Tuesday, for the chairman at large of the district. The work of the various committees for the coming year was discussed. The following chairmen were present: Mrs. E. R. Burton, San Carlos, Mrs. Gaston Periat, San Mateo, Mrs. R. D. Richards, Burlingame, Mrs. John J. Garland, Menlo Park, Mrs. F. M. Stanger, Mrs. Ernest H. Hills, Jr., and Mrs. Floyd E. Huff, Burlingame, Mrs. E. A. Shappard, San Mateo, Mrs. C. A. Andrews, San Mateo, and Mrs. John F. Coad.

On August 21, at 10:a.m. in the Burlingame Library, a publicity conference will be held under the direction of Mrs. Joseph E. Morcombe, Regional Director of Publicity, National Congress of Parents and Teachers. As the district is fortunate in securing Mrs. Morcombe for this service, it is expected that all publicity chairmen will attend. Mrs. Morcombe was state publicity chairman for three years.

Parent education classes, under the direction of Dr. Gertrude Laws, will start in San Francisco and Berkeley for the units of the bay area, August 30 and 31.

Child welfare has always been a major activity of the district, together with health conditions in home and school, and safety problems. Some splendid leaflets on child hygiene, social hygiene, children and their parents, and safety, are available at the district desk in the Burlingame Library Building.

Friend Rescues Fisherman?

On Tuesday of this week two Daly City residents—Homer Gambler of San Diego Avenue and Peter Pavlos, proprietor of Peter's Lunch—hied themselves to Pittsburg on a fishing trip bent.

It is reported that during their endeavors to induce some of the finny tribe to nibble and "take the hook" Gambler hooked a twelve inch specimen. It is said that in his attempts to land the fish he became so excited that he was about to fall from the boat into the waters of the strait. He was rescued by his companion, who subdued him and pulled him back to safety into the craft.

It is said that Pete is now wondering what would have happened to Gambler had the latter happened to snag a 12-pounder.

REGISTRATION IS GREATEST IN COUNTY HISTORY

Record Shows 44,219 Voters Entitled to Participate in Coming Elections

According to reports of the tabulation of registrations released by County Clerk Hinman the greatest number of voters ever to do so have elected to exercise their franchises.

A total registration of 44,219 is shown by the figures. There are 24,390 Republicans, 18,176 Democrats, 1454 non-partisan, 158 Socialists, 12 Prohibitionists, 3 Communists and one Commonwealth.

The Third Supervisorial District leads with the greatest number of registrations, the First District is second on the list, and the Second District holds third rank. The Fifth District, comprising Burlingame and Millbrae, is fourth, and the coastside is last with 1642 voters.

The Democrats have gained nearly 400 in registrations in the last two years and the Republicans have lost more than 1000, according to registration announcements.

.Clerk Hinman said the registrations for 1934 are one-third greater than in the election of 1930 and nearly 3000 more than two years ago.

COLMA DRUIDS TO HONOR THEIR GRAND OFFICERS

Will Have Reception and Banquet on Evening of Official Visit

Officers of the Grand Grove of the United Ancient Order of Druids will pay a visit to Olive Grove No. 116, U. A. O. D., on Friday evening, August 24.

They will be entertained by a reception, banquet and other entertainment during their stay.

The meeting will be held at Colombo Hall in Colma and Noble Arch John Schwartz will preside.

All members of Olive Grove are urgently requested to attend to pay honor to their grand officers.

Olive Grove extends a cordial invitation to all members of other county Groves to be present and meet the visiting officers.

DALY CITY NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Secor, pioneers of Daly City, are at present at Calistoga, where Mr. Secor is seeking to recover from an illness of ten months. He was first afflicted with pneumonia and now is suffering with shingles. The Secors have been residents of this city for twenty-six years.

Mrs. Mal Tacchi and daughter Marilyn of South City were luncheon guests, Tuesday, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Flora Foppiano of Evergreen avenue.

James Frazier of Hanover street returned last Saturday from a vacation spent at Crater Lake.

FUNNY FELLOW

Quite unusual was the deliberation with which Dr. John Klutho, 65, committed suicide in Los Angeles recently. He rigged up a machine whereby he fired a bullet into his head as he lay in a box. Equally unusual was his farewell note, which read: "To grandma—I apologize. To my sisters—I am sorry. To the rest of the world—Nerts."

VETERANS ASK LABOR QUOTA

(Fred R. Linser, Publicity Chairman)

Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held the regular semi-monthly meeting Friday, August 10, at Masonic Temple, with Commander Allen presiding.

Among important questions discussed was the subject of employment of San Francisco residents on federal PWA projects in San Mateo County where the work project runs into the county. In view of the fact that the loan was being granted from federal funds and 30 per cent was an outright gift, the V. F. W. feel that at least a portion of the unskilled labor should be supplied from the unemployed of our county. The relief problem locally is just as serious as in any section of the state.

It was voted to communicate with all Posts in the Area and solicit their assistance to have federal regulations changed so as to permit San Mateo residents to be used on all government projects where this county is affected, and every effort made to have employed every man in this county.

The meeting scheduled for Friday, August 24, has been called off to permit full co-operation at the V. F. W. Night at Bayshore Kennel Club. The V. F. W. champion drum and bugle corps of Emeryville will be present. All Post colors will be presented, with short services and retirement at a later time in the evening with appropriate ceremonies. A beautiful cup will be awarded for the V. F. W. special event. This will be the greatest night of the present season and an enjoyable time is promised all who attend. There will be no increase in the admission price of 10 cents each. Come out and bring your friends.

The first dance of the fall and winter season will be held on Saturday evening, August 18, in Eagles Hall. Good music will be furnished. All political aspirants present will be introduced, but there will be no speeches.

Keep open the following dates:

Saturday, August 18—Dance, at Eagles Hall.

Friday, August 24—Bayshore Kennel Club.

Watch the V. F. W. Special. Something you can't afford to miss.

Conducts Inquest

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Eline Kinsler of Miriam street, whose demise was noted last week as having occurred at Villa Sanitarium, was held Monday afternoon of this week at 1:30 o'clock.

Coroner J. C. McGovern conducted the proceedings.

Decision was that death resulted from coronary sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries of the heart.

FARALLONE NINE EASILY DEFEATED BY ROYCE SPORTS

Winning Pitcher Allows but Two Hits and Strikes Out Nine Batters

(By "Moe" Plansky)

In a thrilling but one sided game, played Sunday afternoon at their club diamond in San Francisco, the Farallone baseball team was easily defeated by the Royce Sports by the tune of 9 to 3.

Featuring the contest was the stellar twirling of the Royce pitcher, Jack Gertzenberg. His control was almost perfect. He allowed his opponents only two hits in the game and sent nine of them back to the bench by the strikeout route.

The Royce hitters fattened up their batting averages at the expense of the chuckers of the Farallone team. Every member of the home boys gathered one or more hits to increase his percentage standing.

Lewis and Johnson led the batting assault, each collecting three lusty bingles. The team as a whole amassed fifteen blows.

Following is the box score:

street was read. It pointed out the crossing was a hindrance to traffic and suggested a remedy therefor. The communication was from Joint Highway District No. 10, Junipera Serra Extension. It was referred to the city engineer.

California Municipal Utilities Association filed contract in consideration of payment of $100 by the city as a fee for the year ending June 30, 1935. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

A communication from the California Municipal Utilities Association called attention to the convention being held at Pasadena, September 24 to 26. After discussion, it was decided that the city would benefit by having representation at the meeting. Mayor Smith and Councilman Sundermann said they would attend.

The library committee reported total circulation for the month of July to have been 3774, with 62 new members.

Permission was granted the Pacific Gas & Electric Company to erect a pole at Frankfort and Lowell streets, in order to improve service in that section.

Several members of the council reported attending a meeting with the Americanization committee and going on record and pledging 100 per cent co-operation to uphold the constitution of the United States of America.

Mayor Smith reported attending a meeting of the League of California Municipalities. He said that, whereas other cities are burdened with delinquent taxes, he was proud to point out that Daly City delinquencies are below normal.

The council, feeling it to be for the best interests of the children of Daly City to be provided with opportunity for supervised play on Saturdays and holidays, instructed the clerk, by resolution, to request authority from the Board of School Trustees of the Elementary Schools to use the recreation grounds of the schools for that purpose.

The following communication was sent to the school board:

City, Hall of Daly City, August 14, 1914.

Board of Trustees of Grammar School District, Daly City, California.

Honorable Members of the Board of Trustees:

The City Council of Daly City, at its meeting last night, by resolution, requested authority from the Board of Trustees of your district to use the recreation grounds of the schools under your jurisdiction for supervised play by inhabitants of the City of Daly City.

The play will be conducted under the supervision of paid supervisors of this city.

We are informed that, in order to comply fully with the requirements of the public liability policy which the city holds, that express written authority must be given by your Board of Trustees for the use of your recreational grounds for such supervised play.

As the City Council found it to be for the best interests of the children of Daly City that such supervised play be conducted on Saturdays and holidays, this request is made for your consideration.

Respectfully yours,

HENRY SUNDERMANN,
Acting City Clerk.

SERA DISCUSSED AT PUBLIC MEET

Representatives Tell Aims And Objectives of Organization

A large number of citizens from all parts of the county assembled at the Burlingame High School, Monday evening, at a meeting called by the County oBard of Supervisors for the purpose of allowing the representatives of SERA explain the relief setup in this county from the viewpoint of the state and federal organization.

The meeting was called to order by Dr. C. V. Thompson, chairman of the board, who introduced Miss Alma Holzihuh, representing SERA, who made the principal address.

She explained in detail that there were only six outside workers employed for investigations in this county out of a total of forty-one employes.

The principal thing stressed by the speaker was the fact that these employes, to be qualified, must have a university or college education and have had certain practical experience in social service work. She also said there were not a sufficient number of residents in the county to qualify for all the positions.

Robert J. Koshland, chairman of the San Mateo County relief committee, explained the work of his committee and its efforts to give this county the best administration possible. The relief director, Captain L. G. McAloney, made a few remarks concerning the work of his office.

A number of questions were asked the speakers, and answers given.

James Ferguson, principal of the Jefferson Union High School and a member of the county relief committee, in a brief talk, stressed the importance of the unemployed of the county co-operating with the officials in carrying out the SERA program and other work relief programs as they are set up.

SEVENTH GAME WON BY THEATER BASEBALL TEAM

Home Boys Have Winning Streak Which Appears Hard to Break

It seems impossible to find opponents to stop the breakneck winning stride of the Daly City Theater baseball club. This team Sunday won its seventh straight game at Ocean View Park.

This time they defeated the well-known and strong Star Olive Oil club in an exciting contest by a score of 5 to 1.

The Theater team hurler, Bob Silvestri, pitched a three hit game and looked well throughout. If he keeps up his present pace he should soon be ready for promotion to higher company.

While the batting was not unusually heavy, the hits came when they meant advancement of runners or scoring those on the paths.

The best hitter of the game was Tom Long, who had two hits to his credit. Most of the other boys made at least one hit each.

The score follows:

The team plays under the sponsorship of Manager Atkinson of the Daly City Theater. It is managed by Mr. Pfeiffer, who is well pleased with the work of the players.

TO STUDY ALASKA AIR MAIL ROUTE

Harlee Branch Will Make Scouting Trip on West Coast to the North

Establishment of air mail service between the West Coast and Alaska in the near future was indicated in the planning of a trip over the possible route by Harlee Branch, second assistant Postmastter General.

Branch, who also hopes that air mail and passenger service to Europe and Hawaii may be realized within the next few years, will visit Alaska the first of September. He said the department for some time had been considering plans for this service to bring the territory nearly a week closer to the States.

Time Difference Cited

"If it is found safe and practicable to inaugurate air mail service to Alaska," he said, "I feel it would do much to opening up developement in the territory.

"Whereas now the mail passenger boat leaving Seattle on, say, a Monday does not reach Seward until Saturday, a plane could go up the coastal route, stopping at the larger points, and reach Seward, the central interior mail distributing point, in a day and a half.

Link in Defense

"Also, I believe the establishment of airplane service, connecting with the present intra-territorial service we already have, would be a considerable national defense addition."

Branch will attend the National Rural Mail Carriers' convention at Denver on August 21, and will sail from Seattle for Seward about August 24 or 25. He plans to circle on a trip through Fairbanks, Junean and Nome, and return by the following week's boat.

NEW BILL WILL ASK U. S.-ALASKA ROAD

Plans for a new battle in Congress for completion of the 2200 mile Seattle-Fairbanks, Alaska-Pacific highway were announced in Seattle recently by Anthony J. Dimond, Alaska's delegate in Congress.

"I believe we should offer to build the 1000 miles in Canada, as well as the 200 miles in Alaska," he said.

"I am planning to draw a new measure, which will authorize the President to make any arrangements that may be advisable with Canada, as well as providing the necessary funds."

Overheated Motor

When the motor becomes so hot that there is an odor of burning oil it should be left standing at least an hour before refilling the radiator, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association. When the refilling is begun the motor should be run at idling speed in order to distribute the cold water equally through the cooling system and lessen the danger of damage due to sudden cooling.

SECOND THE MOTION

Tests of a certain make of pens are said to include dropping them from the twenty-fourth floor of a skyscraper and having them run over by motor trucks without damage. That's the kind Uncle Sam should supply for postoffice lobbies.

TRAIL BLAZERS ON DUO FLIGHT TO FAR NORTH

Jack Hammell and Wife on Air Trip for Inspecting Mining Interests

If you don't know Jack Hammell, you haven't met the most dynamic character conected with the mining industry of Canada and the man who has done more to "crack open" the North than any other one individual.

If you have not had the privilege of meeting Mrs. Jack Hammell, you don't know one of the really charming trail blazers of the uncharted expanse that lies beyond the 60th parallel.

They were in Vancouver a short time ago stopping over for a few hours after an air trip that brought them clear across the continent to the Atlin district, where Hammell has important gold placer interests that he is "cracking open" with his usual linguistic and physical abandon.

It would take a battery of court stenographers to take down in what he can say in 15 minutes in an inimitable cyclonic torrent. There is no pause, nor has there been in 57 years, so far as known.

This is the man who brought $25,000,000 into the development of the great Flin Flon Mine, in Manitoba, now one of the most perfectly equipped projects of the kind in the world. Many years ago, Jack was one of the original locators and only those who know something of the utter desolation of that country in those days can appreciate what it took in energy and stick-to-it-ive-ness to stand by till big capital pricked up its ears.

Well Known In Ontario

In Ontario he is equally well known, partly through his operations at Howey, in the Red Lake area, where he can now witness the results of his pioneer work in a fine plant grinding out gold from the lowest grade ore mined in Canada, at the lowest cost and paying dividends.

Lately he has been occupied with opening the Pickle-Crow Lake district, also in Ontario, and expects to have a new 150-ton mill in operation before the end of the year, depending largely upon the completion of a government marine railroad to expedite delivery of machinery and supplies to another out-of-the-way mineral strong-box that he has partly cracked open.

Another Klondike

In the fast-coming province of Quebec, Jack is also a leading spirit, with groups of claims in the thick of things, right up against the properties now being drilled with such success by the biggest companies in the Dominion.

Away up north in British Columbia he is also a well-known and welcome figure. Just now he is searching for another Klondike and thinks he may have it in miles of leases on Consolation, Ruby Royce and Lincoln creeks, in the Liard River area, about 45 miles north of Atlin.

Associated with him there is another dynamic pioneer—Captain Bob Adams, one of the best-known and best-posted placer miners in the Dominion.

While here, Jack paid over $5000 in cash for the latest and largest type Keystone drill, with extra parts, to be shipped immediately to Atlin. The overburden on the creeks upon which his leases are located is very deep from 100 to 125 feet—and so he is taking no chances, casing for 200 feet accompanying his order.

This operation is being carried on under the name of Yukon Border Placer Golds, in which Jack has invested the greater part of the capital, but in which also many of his associates in Toronto and else where are interested.

Good Flier

An inveterate flier, able to handle the stick himself, he covers more ground in a year than any other mining man and is not happy unless he is out beyond the pale of civilization.

And he is by no means unknown in the haunts of the rich in New York, Montreal and other great centers. His line of talk has turned eyes upon Canada's mines that would otherwise have remained blind. In fact, Jack Hammell is one of Canada's salesmen par excellence.

He left with his charming wife on the Canadian National Railway, their first stopping place was Hudson, Ontario, whence they will trek by air to the Pickle-Crow Lake project, which is now much in Jack's mind and where he says depth has disclosed ore running two or three ounces gold per ton.

Man For B. C.

Incidentally, both Mr. and Mrs. Hammell are incensed that the provincial government should be supplanting Gold Commissioner W. W. Wright, of Atlin, with an untried man. Jack says he is liked by everyone in the district, handles his office efficiently and courteously and knows every nook of the district.

Hammell is the kind of man British Columbia needs to bring her opportunities in a mining way before the world of capitalism. He never minces his emphatic words and, no matter where he may be,in prospector's cabin or the mansions of the wearer of financial purple, people have got to listen.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Development of profitable ore is proceeding at several points in the old Blue Bell Mine in the Hayden Hill district of Modoc County. The new shaft is down about 250 feet and opening of new territory is advancing steadily. Drifts have been extended into territory believed to contain extensions of important ledges, and some good ore is said to have been recently uncovered below the old workings. The property is operated by the Hayden Hill Gold Mining Company, controlled by the wealthy Stratton interests of Idaho.

A group of Californians, headed by C. G. Lindley of Los Angeles, have purchased 220 acres of placer land near Cave City, Oregon. Fourteen acres of this land had been worked last summer by the hydraulic method and the returns are said to have been quite high.

Representatives of J. R. Foster of Seattle and J. C. Hill of Portland have announced the purchase of the Jack Ackley placer mine on Kerby Creek, in Oregon. The mine is one of the oldest in Josephine County. The machinery is being installed.

A movement has been started by the Grass Valley Chamber of Commerce to bring a gold buyer and assay office to that city for the benefit of small gold mining projects. Loyle Freeman, who started the movement, says Grass Valley is the most unusual city in the state in this respect, being the largest mining town in the state and, perhaps, the only one which has no assay office or gold buyer.

Figures of Tuolumne County mining reveal gold production for the fiscal year ending August 1, 1934, totaled $577,322. The amount, which does not include shipments made directly to the San Francisco mint by scores of miners, compares with total shipments of $82,229 in 1932, and approximately the same amount last year.

Evidence that the mining industry has advanced during the last year in the county is the fact that there are approximately seventy-five mines operating now which employ from five to twenty-five men. About thirty are equipped with mills and operate the plants full or part time.

TRAVEL PLAYS PART IN BUSINESS GAINS

The great recreational travel "industry" of the United States is in the midst of its biggest year since 1929, with a mass movement toward play places so distributed over the face of the country that its significance as an influence toward business recovery is not generally realized. This is the statement of John R. Graham of Merced, president of the California State Automobile Association, based upon records of the touring bureau of the motorists organization and information from affiliated A. A. A. clubs.

Graham declared that it can be conservatively estimated that the 1934 outlay for vacation travel by motorists alone will reach three billion dollars, or about twenty per cent more than the estimated outlay in 1933.

Studies of motor tourist travel over a period of years indicate that spending of the three billion will be divided about as follows:

Transportation, meaning gas, oil, and other car operation costs, will account for $600,000,000; hotels and other accommodations will receive another $600,000,000; retail stores will be patronized for vacation outfits and other purchases to the extent of $750,000,000; hotel dining rooms, restaurants, and other eating places will receive $630,000,000; theaters, golf courses, fishing and hunting expenditures will account for $240,000,000; and the bill for refreshments, candies, and confections will run to $180,000,000.

California, with its fine roads and wealth of motoring attractions, figures to receive a goodly share of this flood of travel dollars, Graham said. He added that the effect of this huge travel bill on the economic structure of the country cannot be overestimated, as it accrues to no single section nor is it diverted into any single channel of trade, but is the most widely distributed of all forms of expenditure.

SILVER MINES OF AMERICA TO BE RECLAIMED

Rehabilitation Probable as Result of Recent Action By Administration

A prominent California mining official views the silver situation, since President Roosevelt's recent action regarding rehabilitation of the white metal in the following manner, as disclosed in an interview with the correspondent of the Associated Press:

America's supply of silver for nearly a quarter of a century has come almost wholly as a by-product of other ores. Idaho has one or two straight silver producers, there are an equal number in Utah and some in other scattered states, but, practically speaking, almost all of America's silver comes from mining properties which derive from 75 to 95 per cent of their revenues from baser metals.

In Montana these ores are copper and zinc; in Arizona, copper; in Idaho, lead, zinc and copper; in California, lead and a little copper; in Nevada, chiefly copper, and in Colorado, gold. In all of these states, listed as the principal silver producers of the United States, gold is generally found in association with silver.

Climbing silver prices, however, must inevitably lead to mining developments, and since the impetus received through the Coinage Act of last December, which in effect gave mining men 64½ cents an ounce for their silver, reopening of old mines has been under way.

The Kelly-Rand mine, once famous producer of the Randsburg district in California, and a pure silver property, is being rehabilitated; plans are in progress to reopen the Calico district near San Bernardino, also a straight silver producer; and one or two relatively larger properties have been put into production in Nevada, and Utah and Idaho have materially increased their yields.

The thing that would set the silver mining world on fire, however, would be the discovery of new large deposits of straight silver ores, such as gave Nevada its famous boom.

Golfer Returns From Meet

Melvin Kennedy of Mission street returned Monday from Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was entered in the United States amateur golf championship tournament held there.

He was one of a group of four who qualified to represent San Francisco in this event.

Mr. Kennedy spent two days in Chicago, where he viewed the Century of Progress Exposition.

PERSEVERANCE WINS

Bandits in Detroit recently showed determination worthy of a better calling. Attempting to hold up one bank, they were routed by tear gas, released when the cashier pressed a button. Proceeding to another bank six blocks away, they had better luck, securing $3,000 and making a safe get-away.

"Class Of California Horses Is Very High"

By J. W. MARCHBANK

One lesson derived from racing now on in various sections of the country cannot be given too much emphasis—the lower the commission on the pari-mutuel pools at the tracks the greater the likelihood of the meetings going through with flying colors. A reasonably low "take" simply is a sure sign that the session of the thrilling pastime is being conducted on a sportsmanlike basis. As we have said on other occasions, if money making is the desideratum—stay out of the thoroughbred game.

There is quite a bit of activity these days at the fairs, with the thoroughbreds getting more of a "break" than in other years. Followers of the harness brigade have come to a realization that the funds for the upkeep of the fair circuit come from thoroughbred racing at major courses. The more encouragement given to the runners, the better the class of the sport at the fairs themselves.

Unfortunately, an impression has gone abroad that California is not producing many horses that merit substantial purses. The propagators of such nonsense are woefully ignorant of the facts. California is producing good horses, but not in sufficient numbers to maintain the sport over a long period, with the scene shifting from time to time.

Probably a survey of the records would show that a majority of the cheaper variety of performers now in the West first saw the light of day east of the Rockies. It is merely a chance they happened to be shipped out here at some time or other.

California has turned out gallopers capable of holding their own anywhere in the world and with all indications of the brightest undoubtedly soon will once more attract the attention of qualified experts of both breeding and racing. In preparing for that happy period of the sport, reduction of the "take" from twelve to nine per cent is an urgent necessity.

"How to Approach a Strange Dog" is the title of a recent magazine article. One safe way is with a sawed-off shotgun.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: Did Beau Brummel really exist?

Answer: Yes. His real name was George Bryan. He was an Englishman of fashion, who for twenty-one years set the London taste in dress and manners and yet died miserably in an asylum for the poor. At the age of sixteen he gained the friendship of the Prince of Wales, afterward King George IV, who made him an officer in his own regiment of the Tenth Hussars and showed him flattering attention during the period when Brummel, prosperous and admired, lived sumptuously on the fortune that had been left him by his father.

Brummel was not a fop, as is generally thought; he was fastidious about his appearance, but dressed, as Lord Byron said, "with exquisite propriety." A long course of extravagant living, however, brought him heavily into debt, and in 1816 he fled to Calais, in northern France, to escape his creditors. Thereafter he was dependent on the generosity of friends, growing poorer from year to year, until his death in Caen, France, where for a brief time he had held the position of consul.

"Beau Brummel" was dramatized for Richard Mansfield, and later for moving pictures, with John Barrymore in the title role.

Question: From what is camphor made?

Answer: From the wood and bark of a group of trees belonging to the laurel family. The camphor of commerce comes from trees cultivated in Japan and China and on the island of Formosa.

Question: What is the area of Canada?

Answer: The Dominion of Canada, with a total area of 3,684,723 square miles, occupies slightly less than one-half of the North American continent. The greatest length of the Dominion from east to west is about 2,700 miles; from north to south its greatest extent is 1,600 miles. Canada is the largest country in the world with the exception of Russia and China, Australia being classed as a continent.

Question: Is the story, "The Man Without a Country," by Edward Everett Hale, based on an historical event?

Answer: The story was accepted in such sober faith that, in a later edition, the author felt obliged to state in an appendix that it was not founded on fact.

Question: Where is Glacier National Park?

Answer: In northern Montana.

Question: Who are Bedouins?

Answer: Mohammedans of the Arab race. They inhabit chiefly the deserts of Arabia, Syria, Egypt and North Africa. They are patient and enduring and they lead a wandering existence, associating in families under "elders" or "sheiks" or in tribes under "emirs." They are regularly shepherds, herdsmen and horse breeders, but, because of long summer droughts, they raid one another for self support and plunder unprotected travelers, whom they consider trespassers. They are ignorant as regards writing and books, but have good memories and vivid imaginations, which find play in their song and story They live chiefly on rice, vegetables, honey, locusts or even lizards at times. The ordinary dress of the men is a long shirt, girt at the loins, a black or red and yellow turban for the head, and sandals. The women wear loose trousers, a long shirt and a large dark blue shawl covering the head and figure.

THRILLING FIGHT BETWEEN A MAN AND CROCODILE

An under water battle between a man and a crocodile at a depth of more than thirty feet will be shown on the screen for the first time in "Tarzan and His Mate," thrilling adventure story to be shown at the Daly City Theater on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 19, 20 and 21. One of the combatants is Johnny Weissmuller.

In the new picture, directed by Cedric Gibbons, the swimming champion was required to plunge into a river with a man-eating "croc" for a scene in which he saves the life of Maureen O'Sullivan.

To photograph the strange battle a special camera device was constructed to penetrate water depths. The resulting action will provide many gasps in addition to the thrills of elephant charges, battles with lions, rhinoceros charges, giant apes and other jungle denizens to be included in the picture.

Appearing in the cast with Weissmuller and Miss O'Sullivan are Neil Hamilton, Paul Cavanaugh, Forrester Harvey, Doris Lloyd, William Stack, Desmond Roberts and Nathan Curry. The story is based on the famous fictional character created by Edgar Rice Burroughs.

LIKED THE ATMOSPHERE

King Tut's "curse" has no terrors for James H. Breasted, noted Orientalist, who laughs at the ieda that there has been anything supernatural about the deaths of several persons who engaged in excavating the famed Egyptian tomb a few years ago. Said he: "All tommyrot. I defy that curse. For two weeks I slept in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, and took my meals there. I never felt better in my life." Dr. Breasted is returning to Egypt to resume work at the tomb.

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS EXTRACTED FROM EVERY DAY LIFE

(By Lillian Landini)

Jails and prisons are the complement of our schools—
So many less you have of the latter,
So many more you must have of the former.—Mann.

On demand of churchmen, educators, parents and workers of child welfare organizations motion picture producers will advance better, cleaner and saner pictures in the future.

We have been educating our youth by allowing them to view hideous, monstrous and gangster pictures which would and have kept grownups from sleep and have given everyone who attends these performances an inward revolting of the finer senses.

Everyone who has studied children knows that pictures live forever in a child's mind—where talk enters one ear and goes out the other; that is, nine times out of ten. What we sow today we reap tomorrow. So let us be up and doing. We cannot make this world of people perfect in a day. The children will sometimes be forced in every day life to view, and sometimes take a part in, a drama in which they never dreamed of being the understudy much to their dislike.

Most of us will agree that education of the proper kind is the only solution. Build their bodies by giving them healthy play. Good schools, where environment will develop the desire for the impressive and dignified beauty which inspires the mind to reach out for better and more sacred ideals. The children will realize for themselves that there is but one way for them to be permanently successful—that is the right way.

Right education will be the only way to close the doors to exciting, hideous and "tough" pictures. There will always be money hunters, who will not care how they make it. But the day is not far off when our boys and girls will be immune from poorly written books and magazines, degrading pictures and other bad influences.

Building fine, healthy bodies is not all. We must give them everything that will make and keep their minds keen and alert, ever ready to exert efforts to combat bad influences. Then our boys and girls will rise as a determined, right thinking nation.

Who knows, if we could learn the truth, but that John Dillinger started his career of crime as he ended it, at some picture house. He must have enjoyed pictures of the gangster type, as he knew that he was taking a chance and perhaps for the last time he wanted to see his life as it really was.

Our children are in danger. Let us stand together to give them the best education in spiritual, physical and mental training, no matter what the cost may be, financially or otherwise.

Then, and only then, may we expect peace with God and our neighbors throughout the world.

The Dillinger family are commercializing their son's crimes. Those who have promoted this scheme, and by their offers of money have induced them to exploit their own flesh and blood in crime to our beloved ones and to our nation should be punished, for John Dillinger's crimes are history of disgraceful episodes.

The lust for money has done much to degrade motion pictures. Let us stay away from such performances—and we will win.

MAYBE HE DIDN'T NEED THEM

TO MAKE THESE SAVINGS ON GAS HEATING EQUIPMENT

SUMMER will soon be gone. Soon fickle fall with a sudden drop in temperature will be here. If you have an old-fashioned heating system this means getting back to the routine of ordering, storing and handling fuel and constant fire tending. And even then perhaps, never getting your house really warm.

Why not stop all this right now and save money? Change to the carefree comfort of Natural Gas heating. By automatic thermostat, by three-heat control or by turning a key you can keep your house at desired, healthful temperature no matter how changeable the weather may be.

Go ahead — make the change now. Why delay when it is so easy to pay for gas heating equipment at this time? It takes only a few hours, for example, to install a Natural Gas burner in your present furnace. Floor furnaces or circulating heaters and other gas heating appliances are likewise quickly and easily installed. Then you and your family are ready to enjoy the convenience of clean, carefree, healthful heating this fall and winter and many winters to come.

Remember, the special 10% Summer Discount on gas heating equipment ends this month. Why not go ahead and order your Natural Gas heating installed today?

SALESMEN SEE BUSINESS GAINS ON MANY FRONTS

Contrary to all previous opinions, retail trade throughout the country rose steadily during July, according to Dun and Bradstreet's. In spite of the drought, strikes, etc., business showed a "surprising tenacity" and sales for the week of July 23, increased 6 per cent to 8 per cent over the previous week and were 5 percent to 20 per cent higher than last year. The largest gains recorded were in the South Atlantic, New England and Middle Atlantic states.

Record registrations of buyers marked the opening on July 30 of the house furnishings show and the china and glass show in New York, and of several big markets in Chicago—women's and children's apparel, glassware, house furnishings, gifts and electrical appliances. More than 1000 buyers atended the house furnishings show in New York during the first twenty-four hours, compared with 1600 for a whole week last year. In Chicago, the apparel openings brought an increase of 65 per cent in buyer registrations. Sales response for the first day was so encouraging that a general optimism pervaded all the shows.

The greatest number of depositors on record since the system was started more than 100 years ago, is reported by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. Deposits have risen by $125,766,227 since January 1 and 273,898 depositors have been gained. A total of 13,686,947 depositors is reported.

Total production of boots, shoes and slippers in the United States for the first five months of 1934 increased 14.4 per cent over the same period last year. New York replaced Massachusetts as the leading producer during this period.

The Chief of the Chemical Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce regards the increase in the import of perfumes and flavoring materials as an indication of returning prosperity. A gain of 73 per cent is recorded for the first five months of this year over last in the import of perfumes, and a gain of 100 per cent in the import of materials used in the manufacture of domestic perfumes, cosmetics, etc.

More than one million household electric refrigerators were sold in the United States during the first six months of this year—a new high record for this period and an increase of 50 per cent over the first half of 1933.

In anticipation of large fall volume, manufacturers of electrical appliances are putting on the market new products at lower prices—refrigerators at $75 and eletrcic ranges at $70, among other items. These products, first worked out in connection with the Tennessee Valley Authority, found such a response in that region that manufacturers have decided to proceed nationally on the policy that lower prices mean greater markets.

Retail auto financing of new passenger cars, on a daily average basis of dollar value, showed an increase in June of 58 per cent over June, 1933, and an increase of 81 per cent over the same month in 1932.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Blue Eagle's First Birthday: On August 1 of last year, America's most celebrated bird first spread its wings to symbolize the concerted effort of the nation to defeat the depression. The largest peacetime volunteer army ever assembled in the United States worked together in the national drive to enlist every employer in the President's Re-employment Agreement. Under the direction of 6500 local committees, a million and a half volunteers obtained the signatures of 2,300,000 employers to this agreement to increase the purchasing power of workers by spreading work and raising pay. Nearly 60,000,000 consumers signed pledges to support Blue Eagle employers.

Flashes From the Business Front: The United States Steel Corporation reports larger earnings for the quarter ending June 30, 1934, than for any corresponding period since 1930—$21,082,389, compared with $6,578,731 in the preceding year. Payrolls for the quarter amounted to $65,094,000, as compared with $33,468,000 for the same period in 1933. General Motors' months of this year increased 50.5 per months of this year increased 5.50 per cent over the same period last year. One hundred and fifty-eight industrial corporations reporting earnings for the first half of 1934, show a profit jump of 85 per cent over this period last year. Business failures for the year to date have declined by about 50 per cent from last year's corresponding total.

Tribute to Coal Code: J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, credits NRA with the revival of optimism in the coal mining business. "Only a year ago," he told several hundred operators at a recent luncheon, "the coal industry was demoralized by competitive prices. Operators were not selling coal. They were selling the wages of their miners. Now nearly all operators are endeavoring to find methods of increasing co-operation to benefit the entire industry," and "the New Deal seems to be only beginning."

No Compliants: The Code Authority of the can manufacturing industry reports that 8536 additional workers have been employed since the code became operative. Employes are working seven hours less per week and weekly payrolls have increased by $92,062. Code provisions calling for equitable adjustments in the higher wage brackets have been scrupulously carried out and only 4.7 per cent of the workers are being paid at the minimum rate established, although the code would permit 20 per cent to be so paid. Despite its watchfulness, no complaints of code violations have been received, the Code Authority concludes.

Improved Conditions Due to NRA: A. B. Carrington, president of the United States Tobacco Association, declares that the New Deal has brought renewed faith in our country and its institutions . . . and our own tobacco industry has derived a very large share in the general benefits." The improvement already under way in real estate throughout the country is being greatly stimulated by the NRA realty brokerage code, according to Hugh Potter, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. Stockholders of the Bulova Watch Company were told by Arde Bulova, chairman, that "the administration has succeeded in stemming the steady backward drift of business. We feel that these gains will continue and the co-operation of this company, as one of the leaders in its industry, is pledged to the support of the government."

Standards for Textiles: NRA labels are stimulating textile manufacturers to improve their merchandise and are making consumers more quality conscious, according to Irene L. Blunt, secretary of the National Federation of Textiles. Recent amendments to the silk code, providing for accurate advertising and labelling, are being used by the industry as the levers for enforcing standards to protect both consumers and Blue Eagle employers. The federation, through its technical bureau, is planning to extend the scope of information given to the public by the NRA labelling system.

Value of Advertising

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

When people read about the same goods or service day by day, it impresses their minds and tempts them to buy.

Good advertising makes the public stop, read and desire those things advertised.

The advertising of quality products vanishes sales resistance.

Advertisements are trade pullers.

Every business should be advertised. Only those concerns who advertise and let the public know who they are, where they are, and what they have, ever get anywhere.

Dealers don't have to wait long to sell well advertised lines. They are in demand all the time.

Well advertised products are always showing a fast growing volume, because they are the most reliable sellers and render absolute uniformity in quality.

Wise dealers always feature well advertised lines in local advertising, because it builds good will.

Better business is built easier when encouraged by newspaper advertising.

WHO KNOWS?

This year a special Mother's Day postage stamp will be issued, probably a reproduction of Whistler's famous painting of his mother, which the artist himself described as an "arrangement in black and gray." The original painting is in the Luxembourg gallery in Paris. The new stamp will be of the three-cent demonination.

SOME ANCIENT HAPPENINGS OF CITY REVIEWED

Incidents of Pioneer Days and Characters Recalled For Our Readers

(By An Old-Timer)

While there remain hundreds of interesting things to be related in future articles about dear old Colma and the fond associations that I found there, never to be erased from my memory of that period of twenty-five years ago, I must pause to say that there were happenings around in the mud of the so-called streets "on the hill," that was so rapidly populating with the unfortunate victims of the San Francisco earthquake and fire. There were real estate "sharks" and a smattering bunch of conscientious realtors, who sold the refugees lots on which to place the shacks that were built for them with money derived from the relief fund, and then the important problem of water became paramount. That veteran volunteer fireman, Theodore J. Wickersham, informs me that "for many months the people's source of water supply came from a beautiful spring of pure water just west of the park, next to the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and from three or four private wells." Later three tanks were erected and water was purchased to stock them from the Spring Valley Water Company. One tank, on the east side of Mission road opposite the Knowles ranch house and saloon, supplied the Mission and Vista Grande tracts; another tank, at the top of Santa Ana avenue hill (now Vendome avenue), supplied Hillcrest tract; the other was located in and supplied the Crocker tract.

Then ensued the familiar sight of the refugees who were so faithfully striving for an humlbe home, including mere children, trudging along with buckets of water from early morning until far into the night when lanterns had to be used.

Later, water companies gave the refugees a chance to pay exorbitant prices for water, with plenty of bills amounting to $6 a month—and at that the consumers were notified several times a month to "fill your bath tubs," for the reason that it became necessary to shut off the water in order to repair the leaking second hand pipe mains. This condition continued until the City of Daly City was incorporated. At this time Edward Freyer, chairman of the first board of trustees, who was a capable architect and with much civil engineering experience, conceived the idea of installing a municipal water system, basing his theory partially on the flowing spring mentioned above by Mr. Wickersham. He was enthusiastically supported by the other members of the board—Al J. Green, Thos. J. Mullins, Dennie Quillinan and Martin Oberhouse. This resulted in a $40,000 bond issue for the installation of the Daly City Municipal Water System, which at the present time, we are proud to say, has no superior anywhere.

Chairman Freyer and the other members of the board were, of course, in close association with John D. Daly, John W. Marchbank and the rest of the never to be forgotten gogetters of that time. Edward Freyer and Dennis Quillinan were still members of the board when the water system was installed. The other members at that time were Berton C. Ross, Charles L. Biebel and Silvio A. Landini. That was the crowning glory for Daly City that gave us all a bountiful supply of water; 100 per cent pure; the best in all California; and at a minimum water rate of $1 a month for 2250 gallons.

All praise to the public spirited trustees who thus put Daly City on the map. And especially to the wide-awake Edward Freyer, the author of the scheme, and many other beneficial improvements, such as street paving and sewers.

"Duck" Sullivan, the ex-prizefighter mentioned last week, was one of the numerous "real characters" of Colma. It was alleged by a very few that "Duck" was connected with a shady action in "throwing" a fight. One day he encountered one of his loud-mouthed enemies in action. Instead of "beating up" the fellow, "Duck" good naturedly said to him: "Cully, if you are alive after I am dead don't ever say anything good about me." Then he added: "Give me one little flower in true friendship while I'm alive (with the thought, 'There, Duck, smell that'), and I'll appreciate it far more than a bouquet as big as a bushel basket." How true is the implied thought that we should say kind things of others here and now, not waiting until after they are dead.

Colonel Ed Walsh, chief executive at the White House, was so anxious to keep his name out of the Record that he presented the editor with a ring made from a walrus tusk, claiming he had shot the walrus on the fly.

During dry weather Supervisor Casey always sprinkled the roads on Saturdays, so they would not be dusty on Sundays for pleasure seekers.

Most all the hacks coming from the cemeteries stopped at the Colma saloons. Jack Rodgers said they stopped at his saloon for consolation.

It was said that Pete Callan won first prize as the "Dancing Kid" at Biggio Park when the judges were not looking.

Ben Haubrich finished building two new cottages opposite Coakley's. Ben's charming little daughter Sylvia was one of the brightest pupils in the Jefferson school.

Frank Knowles, the popular saloon man of Hillcrest, returned from an ocean voyage to Los Angeles.

Miss Josephine Armanino was a very talented vocalist, whose sweet voice assisted materially in church services, and she was called on many times for special entertainments. I always believed that if Miss Armanino could have had the advantage of first class musical training she would have become a world famous prima donna. She is the half sister of Louis Nava, a member of the school board at the present time.

Another prominent and popular young lady of Colma twenty-five years ago was Miss Lillie Wight, daughter of George Wight, who afterwards became postmaster and Miss Lillie became the rural delivery mail carrier, her semi-weekly route being on the coast as far south as Salada Beach and Point San Pedro and east to Visitacion. She was the only woman rural delivery carrier in the United States at that time. Later, when George Wight resigned as postmaster to remove to Detroit, Senator James D. Phelan had Miss Josephine Armanino appointed in his stead, and she held the position and filled it with credit for years.

Are you interested? Well, there remains more reminiscence and many times more, that I shall give you from week to week.

STALEMATE RENDEZVOUS

By THAYER WALDO

©, McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

MARK MANSFIELD raised his eyes from the magazine as Satoh came in and queried affably:

"Well, my boy, what's the good word?"

The Japanese beamed and came to a stop by Mark's chair, holding forth a small silver salver on which lay several letters.

"Mail of the afternoon having arrived, sir. I bring only those with writing that have familiarity," he added. "Others from studio I are leaving in sacks, as per the usual."

"Ah—lots of fan mail today, eh? Seems to get larger all the time. Well, let's see the personals."

Satoh handed him the top letter from the tray, saying:

"Excuse, please—this one pretty extra important, I suggest."

The actor glanced at the small, neat script in purple ink and took it eagerly.

"I should say so! Anything from Anita always comes first, and—. Well, I'll be hanged! A San Francisco postmark. That's queer; she didn't say anything Saturday about going up. Now I wonder what. . . ."

His voice trailed off as he slit the flap, drew out the single sheet of paper and unfolded it.

There were only three lines of writing:

"Darling: Meet me in the Hotel Admiral lounge at ten Tuesday evening. I think we can manage what we planned. Hastily, Anita."

Mansfield bounded out of the chair, all casualness gone from his manner, and cried:

"Great Scott! Satoh—get an overnight bag ready, quick!"

The valet scurried away without question.

Mansfield strode to the phone and dialed.

"What time," he asked, when connection was made, "does the next plane leave for Frisco? . . . And can one of your cars go direct from the field to the Hotel Admiral? . . . All right—hold a seat for me. What? . . . Oh—er—J. B. Johnson."

* * * * * * * *

Dashing into the room where Satoh was packing a gladstone, the actor said exultantly:

"Well, after I return from this trip there'll probably be three of us here. How does that strike you?"

The Oriental showed a wide row of gleaming teeth.

"I think pretty too nice for you. Miss French very fine quality girl, all right. But how's about her father which don't like actors and you special?"

Mark spun around with a sudden look of comprehension, exclaiming:

"Of course—her father! I'd forgotten about him. That makes it all clear. She's gone up there to escape his interference and probably plans that we'll fly to Nevada for the wedding. Swell!"

Half an hour later Mansfield stepped from his limousine at the terminal entrance of Grand Central airport and approached the ticket window.

"Reservation for J. J. Johnson," he said.

The man behind the grating stared at him and then smiled in recognition.

"Yes, sir—only it was J. B., Mr. Mansfield."

"Oh, all right," the actor replied with mock resignation; "it's getting so I can't do anything on the quiet any more."

"That's because of your great popularity, sir; every one knows you. Going north for a personal appearance?"

Mansfield's buoyant mood overbalanced his customary reticence.

"Well, I'll tell you," he confided, taking his ticket and change; "it's sort of a private one. I'm going to be married."

Immediately he knew regret.

The eyes of the ticket clerk widened with surprise and an almost avaricious delight.

Turning hastily away to avoid further talk, Mark strode toward the waiting plane. As he did so, the other man grabbed up a telephone and spoke excitedly into its mouthpiece:

"Give me the Examiner—city news room. . . ."

* * * * * * * *

At twenty past ten that evening, Anita French parked her roadster on Seventh street near Broadway in downtown Los Angeles and hurried toward a marquee on which lighted letters spelled: Hotel Admiral.

Her thoughts were of the man she was to meet and of a suitable apology for her tardiness. Still, Mark would understand; he knew how hard it was to slip away from Father.

She entered the hotel's tapestry-hung lounge room.

Along its walls and around reading tables stood numerous easy chairs.

Anita paused just inside to scan the place, and a small frown puckered her brow.

Only two figures, both women, were visible.

She stood for an instant irresolute, then walked toward the nearer of them.

"Pardon me," she said; "did you happen to see a young man with auburn hair and a mustache come in recently?"

"No," the woman answered; "I haven't noticed anyone of that description during the hour I've been here."

Anita thanked her and crossed slowly to a chair on the opposite side.

Slight misgivings arose, but she told herself there must be some perfectly simple explanation.

She had posted that note to him Sunday evening. It would just be a matter of minutes.

An early edition of the morning paper lay with magazines on the table beside her.

Idly she glanced at its headlines—and something weighty seemed suddenly to bear down on her.

There across the paper's top huge black type screamed: MARK MANSFIELD IN SECRET DASH TO MARRIAGE."

With fingers that trembled uncontrollably, Anita picked it up and read into the story:

"Boarding a Pacific Airways plane at seven-fifteen last night, Mark Mansfield, noted screen star, took off for San Francisco with the words, 'I'm going north to get married.'

"The move was a complete surprise, as Mansfield had lately been seen much in the company of Miss Anita French, daughter of a prominent local family. Although Miss French could not be located for a statement, she was known to be in the city. . . ."

Very carefully Anita laid down the sheet.

She couldn't read any further, for it had all grown quite blurred.

Somehow, though, a dazed numbness kept her from feeling anything like pain.

She stood up and started with unhasty steps toward the street door. . . .

* * * * * * * *

Mark Mansfield gave his watch another scrutiny.

The hands showed twenty past eleven.

His eyes raised again for reassurance to the sign across the lounge room which read:

HOTEL ADMIRAL
SAN FRANCISCO
One of the Admiral Chain

Certainly queer, he thought, that there should be this long a delay.

Perhaps—the idea made him distinctly uneasy—perhaps that martinet of a father had trailed her here.

Impatiently Mark shifted in his chair; entertaining that sort of notion was sheer morbidity.

No matter how long it took, he'd wait right here till she came or sent word to him.

One or the other was bound to happen soon.

He picked up from his lap once more a copy of one of the San Francisco papers. For nearly an hour he'd been reading it; yet possibly some unnoticed items remained. Anything for a little diversion, and no other source seemed at hand.

Four pages he turned fruitlessly; then a heading mildly attracted his curiosity. It read: "Unusual Error Re-Routes Mail."

His eye traveled on: "In one of the few recorded occurrences of its kind, according to postal authorities, a sack of first-class mail was accidentally brought here yesterday direct from collection boxes in Los Angeles. On discovering the mishap, local officials ordered the letters sent out from San Francisco post office. It was said. . . ."

Apathetically Mark Mansfield flipped over the page. Such inconsequential stuff to fill a newspaper's columns with. Where, oh where, his brain doggedly demanded, was Anita?

Argument Over Work of Old Silversmiths

Something out of the ordinary has been attempted at the Pennsylvania Museum of Art with an exhibition of miniature English silver, says the Boston Transcript. This dwarfed form of silver collecting runs into great difficulties because of its comparative rarity, yet the Philadelphia institution has assembled more than forty pieces which show the changes in design from Charles I to George III.

It is necessary to recall that a continuous argument has raged concerning miniature silver or, for that matter, miniature metal work of any kind, some protagonists saying that these delightful little pieces were made as toys for fortunate children and others asserting that they were used as working models for larger pieces. To an impartial observer it would seem as though both sides were right, as must be the case in a prolonged argument.

There are records of silver toys being made for young royality. In 1576 a daughter of Henry II of France ordered a silver toy set made for the child of the Duchess of Bavaria, and the practice grew common in the Seventeenth century. On the other hand, it was a frequent practice, in the case of a large or elaborate piece, for the silversmith to make a preliminary model and submit it to the patron, so that changes could be made without undue trouble.

The Famous Shermans

Senator Sherman of Ohio was a brother of the great military hero, Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman. His personal traits contrasted sharply, however, with the more jovial disposition of the general. Senator Sherman's name was presented to the Republican national conventions of 1880, 1884 and 1888 as a candidate for the Presidential nomination, but he never became the choice of his party.

Sealed Train Windows

There will be no disputes about opening windows in the railway carriages of the future, for they will be sealed, according to the Canadian National Railways' Magazine. Instead, the air in trains will be filtered, washed, continually renewed, and maintained at an even temperature. Carriages will be dustless and almost noiseless.

It's High Style to Shine in Satin

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS TO the most outstanding immediate fabric news, it's satin! In all the annals of its history this bright and shining costume medium has never more dramatically illumined the pathway of midseason and early fall styles, than at the present moment.

If anyone thinks that the newer satins "tell the same old story," all we can say is that a most happy surprise awaits each and every so unimaginative a skeptic. Fact is the early arrivals on fashion's stage are delivering a message so refreshingly new and inspirational the moment you glimpse the advance models you will feel the urge to wear satin.

The resplendent evening gowns of gleaming satin in such beguiling tones and tints as mint green, ice blue and that new and illusive dusky pink which is so lovely, the smartly finished daytime suits with their amazingly wide-buckled belts and their primly starched broad white turn-back collars that remind of the picturesque garb of our honored Puritan forefathers, the handsome dressier afternoon satins with their dainty feminine details, and the swagger tailored sports dresses with their many buttons and tricky gadgets, all of which are now on style parade, simply hold one spellbound.

It is just such stunning costumes as the trio pictured which are causing seekers of chic and timely apparel for immediate wear to "catch the vision" of satin. These particular models were carefully selected for illustration in these columns from among scores of strikingly original styles shown at a recent pre-view of fall fashions by the Chicago Wholesale Market council.

The detail that instantaneously strikes the eye as the spotlight centers on the smartly satin-clad woman pictured to the left in this group is the very wide belt and enormous buckle which distinguishes the suit she is wearing. This model is the sort which will start you touring the stores which carry foremost fashions with a determination to acquire a facsimile for your very own. The new finger-tip length coat (a trifle shorter than three-quarter), the roomy graceful sleeves, the straight skirt with just enough of a kick pleat to ease it a bit, these are style details each of which is prophetic of the future.

The fetching satin jacket suit to the right in the picture is warranted to capture the heart of most any style-aspiring young modern. The white satin which fashions the blouse with its scallop-edge sailor collar and down-the-front jabot is metal threaded in a crossbar patterning. One of the big features of the newer materials is that they are all more or less agleam with interweavings of gold and silver.

It is almost needless to say that black satin fashions the suits just described, for undoubtedly black is first choice by a large majority, for street wear. However, any number of smart street models are being tailored of satins in rich autumn browns or greens (green is much talked of for fall) while a satin costume in the newly featured beetroot red or dark blue is considered a last word in chic.

As to the exquisite satin evening gown here shown, imagine it in any delectable pastel you may happen to fancy, or glistening white if you prefer. The cape sleeves and ruched neckline are important style points also the semi-fitted princess lines sans belt are typically new.

FIND TUNIC BLOUSE IN MANY VARIETIES

That blouses will remain a big fashion is generally conceded, but in what forms is a matter of discussion. Very few couturiers have thought seriously, as yet, of models for autumn, and those who have show suits mostly with hip-length jackets and waist-length blouses of the butcher boy type.

The rumor about Russian suit styles has been heard here. Lucile Paray has one suit with a tunic blouse which might come under this designation, and Heim has another, in velveteen with fur bordered coat.

Silk Still Holds First Place for Undergarments

The increasing favor for lingerie neckwear, for cotton frocks and linen suits has brought speculation as to a change in undergarment styles, but so far investigation has failed to reveal any real revival of "lingerie" lingerie. Here and there, one finds a linen nightdress, as at Helen Yrande or one of the Paris lingerie specialists but such a model is an exception; and even at Worth, the prime sponsor of sheer cotton stuffs and frilly touches, as well as petticoat foundations for evening gowns, the answer is that only a few batiste gowns are shown.

Large Parisian Compacts in Brown Simulate Wood

New compacts from Paris are huge affairs made of a brown composition material that looks like wood. They are loose, single pacts, a trifle expensive, but a knockout to look at. To make accessories harmonize, there are bracelets and clips, trimmed in gold, of the same substance, and necklaces in which synthetic wooden links alternate with colored stones.

New Cape Style

A gown of bright flame red satin is cut with a deep square front decollette, accompanied by an ermine cape mounted on a square back yoke.

Square Finger Rings

The expression "round like a ring" doesn't mean anything any more, for there are new finger rings that are square.

VERY SHEER BLACK

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A message of vital importance concerns the vogue for dine, dance and other gowns of more or less formality which are created of black nets or tulles or wispy laces of finest diaphanous texture. When fashioned of daintiest sheer net there is almost sure to be a lavish use of pleated ruche effects. The gown pictured shows a wide ruche trimming outlining the pointed-back-and-front decolletage. A similar ruche trimming heads the deep flounce on the skirt. The silhouette which stresses a slim fitted hipline contrasted by a pronounced and sudden deep flare is typical of the later style trends.

Tricky Earrings

Earrings—once more back on the fashion map—are novel in cut. Many are designed to follow the lobe of the ear instead of standing out, button effect, in front.

SYNOPSIS

On her way to a faculty position in Lostland Academy, Janet Mercer meets Prof. Arthur Fleming, also on his way to the Academy. At the railroad station they meet Mrs. Denver, engaged as matron. At the school the group is struck by an air of mystery pervading the place. Gordon Haskell, proprietor, welcomes them. Wilton Payne completes the Academy faculty. In a schoolroom Janet finds a group which the teachers had supposed were scholars, are wax figures. Haskell explains the unusual circumstances connected with the conduct of the Academy. Among the pupils is Berenice Bracebridge, daughter of the late owner of the school. The story of the tragedy of Lostland Academy is that of two sisters and two brothers of Berenice, who lost their lives in the water, at the same moment, some years ago. The wax figures were modeled in the likenesses of the four children, and Doctor Bracebridge's will provided that they must be preserved. Payne learns from Berenice that the uncouth giant whom Janet had seen with Haskell is named Balder, and is a valuable servant.

CHAPTER III—Continued

Arthur explained. He saw that Berenice's desire to ask Wilton questions gave the latter deep satisfaction. "I don't wonder she's nervous," he commented. "Perhaps Haskell will explain everything satisfactorily this evening. He doesn't seem to have nerves."

"Oh, yes, he has! He's afraid of those wax figures."

"I should think he would be. Always to me—and I'm rather a healthy specimen—there's something stealthy and idiotic about a wax figure—at once helpless and menacing. I don't blame him—but what I am curious to know is, why such properties have to be kept around when it would be so easy to dispose of them? Meanwhile I've made a discovery. On that shelf to the left under the encyclopedias I found these books—school books, some precious possessions, like 'Little Women' and 'Treasure Island,' 'Young People's Anthology of English Verse,' and similar works. On the fly-leaf in a round, boyish hand I read in one of them—wait—I think we'll not be disturbed. I'll fetch it."

He brought the book, an American History, turned back the fly-leaf, and Arthur, looking over his shoulder, read:

Lives there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said
This is my own—my native land?

Below was carefully written: "Yes, G. H.! His native country is Satan's. I wish he would go there, and not come back to plague us any more with his fancied learning. He made Althea cry this morning with his sternness about nothing. I hope he reads this. Then he'll know what we all think of him. N. B."

"I wonder if he ever read it?" Arthur commented.

"Not likely! The top of the book had the dust of years on it."

"Here's another book with a very clever caricature of Gordon Haskell drawn on the fly-leaf. It's signed quite boldly, 'Althea Bracebridge,' and has the legend written beneath: 'Art is truest to nature, then nature to Art.'"

"They must have been interesting children! With a sharp perception of character, Haskell told me to use the library freely; so that I had no compunction in looking at these books. In fact, I did not know I was coming upon anything significant but these testimonies to Haskell's unpopularity with the younger members of the family are significant—justifies our own feeling about him."

The dinner bell put an end to their conference. Janet and Mrs. Denver were coming down the hall. "We've been out," the latter said. "I can breathe better out there in the garden."

"But Mrs. Denver—"

She put her finger on her lips. Haskell was approaching.

"Ah, I'm glad to see you all alive and well. I am dining with you tonight, and I've asked Mrs. Denver to join us. I want to clear up the mystery I knew you would soon find out anyway—the mystery of the four wax figures. But we won't have it for a dinner topic."

He led the way down the east wing to a rather stately room; probably once the dining room of the Bracebridge family. Its oak-paneled walls bore two portraits—one of a young woman walking in the grounds of Lostland academy, the other of the five Bracebridge children, with Berenice, a baby of two, on the grass at the feet of her sister Althea.

"The late Mrs. Bracebridge—the children," Haskell said briefly, and assigned his teachers places at the table. "I would have asked Berenice to come in—but she would not like to hear what I am to tell you. She adored her father. She was, you see, not quite thirteen when he died."

Payne looked wistfully at the portrait, as if to comfort himself with the thought that one at least of that group was still alive.

Dinner was quickly finished. Four people were too impatient to hear the story. Haskell began it quite informally, after having passed cigarettes. "Miss Mercer—or one of you—perhaps all of you had eyes keen enough to see the immobility of these scholars as we passed the schoolroom. They had no business there—rather, Balder had no business to put them there while he was cleaning the other room, and then forget them. But Balder is the kind of fellow who never does what he is told to do, except by accident, and really I hate to have those figures touched by profane hands. The originals were dear to me."

He paused, and seemed for a moment quite abashed in his own thoughts. "I told Mr. Payne the dreadful story of the accident, by which Dr. Jethro Bracebridge lost four children in one terrible casualty. He was in ill health at the time, and blamed himself for having me in the library with him taking dictation, thus preventing me from accompanying the children, as I had wished to do. His nervous condition soon resulted in a kind of brain fever, and his cries that his four children be brought again into his presence were pitiful indeed. We had at the time an advanced pupil whose work as a sculptor had already won recognition, and, oddly enough, he had begun his artistic career in a wax-figure studio, where the figures were made, all save the heads, which he felt more competent to do himself. Under my mother's guidance, with the aid of photographs and his own memories—for he had been a close friend of Jethro and Althea, he modeled most beautifully and truthfully in wax the heads of these children. When they were finished and dressed in clothes the originals had worn in life, desks were put in Doctor Bracebridge's sick room; and from the hour he saw these four figures of his children bending over their tasks apparently he began to improve; but his brain did not clear for many weeks. When it did, he would not have the figures destroyed—and he left a clause in his will that until Berenice was twenty-one the figures should be kept in one of the schoolrooms, that she might hold her lost brothers and sisters in her memory. Sometimes I think the poor doctor's brain was still slightly affected—or he never would have written down such a clause—but even the eccentric wishes of the dead should be respected."

"You Are a Good Man," She Quavered, "Don't Go Away."

There was silence for a moment or two after Haskell ceased speaking. Then Payne said: "After all, there is an end—a terminus to the conditions of the will; and then those memorials may be destroyed. In fact, I think if they are proving detrimental to the success of the academy, to Miss Berenice Bracebridge's nerves—"

Haskell was alert in an instant. "Has she been talking to you?"

"Not to me—to Mr. Fleming. She confessed to him that she was afraid of the figures when not in the room with them; but close to them she had no fear."

Gordon Haskell's round, stubborn head, which had a curious look of being carved in wood, gave a jerk, and his bright eyes moved restlessly.

"Mr. Payne, you remember we discoursed upon the psychological bases of fear. I've often wondered whether the curious terror of those figures I have witnesseed in more than one person may not have its origin in the fact that the four died together, and a father's pitiful and delirious grief had led to the construction of their images?"

"It may be, or it may be simply the fact that they are here—always here!"

Haskell gave a cry and put his hand to his heart, his face becoming blanched and terrible. In an instant he recovered himself. "An old trouble," he apologized with a smile. "I have a bad heart."

"I have not yet seen the figures close," Payne remarked. "Will you take me down to see them?"

Haskell stared at him angrily; then he muttered: "Well, I suppose until everyone's curiosity is fully satisfied there will be no peace. I have to give some orders to the men about tomorrow's work; so I'll call Berenice to take you into the basement."

Berenice soon appeared in the doorway. The draught moved the spun gold of her hair; she glanced toward Wilton Payne. Behind her, her cashmere shawl giving out a gleam of red where the light of the swinging lamp caught it, stood a bent old woman with a motherly, brooding face of affection. As Payne and Berenice passed her, she laid a hand on Payne's arm. "You are a good man," she quavered. "Don't go away."

TO BE CONTINUED.

Supervisors Say Expense Is Less This Year in All Departments

than those of last year. When the board and County Executive Walter T. Kellogg get through with the pruning even the tentative requests will be less, was his assertion. He said further: "No tax rate has been set for next year and will not be set until some time between now and the latter part of the month, and any reported tax rate for next year given out at this time is just speculation."

Controller Stack substantiated Dr. Thompsons' remarks and augmented them with figures. He pointed out that the tax rate last year was $2.083 and this year ,eliminating the relief request of $219,000 or 50.2 cents on the tax rate, and the $128,000 for delinquencies on improvement district bonds and the $85,000 cost of two elections, the tax rate this year would not exceed that of last year.

However, he said, assuming that the bond delinquency fund must go on and with the election fund of $85,000, the tax rate in the county would be only about 23 cents higher, which would leave $60,000 for relief, and still keep the budget within the required 5 per cent limit. If the state board, however, grants the $219,000 relief fund to be raised by taxation then the rate next year will go to $2.814, which is 73 cents higher than last year's.

The controller pointed out the election costs are compulsory under state law and the bond issue delinquency fund is also compulsory under a supreme court ruling and must stand unless an appeal is taken to stop it from going into the budget this year. The relief fund must be met, he said, if this county wants relief contributions totalling nearly three quarters of a million dollars from the federal and state governments.

Stack said the foregoing three items, and not costs of county government, may be the cause of forcing an increase in the tax rate. He explained the only fund the supervisors could control is the relief fund and said it resolved itself into a matter of letting people suffer or raising the funds needed. The controller pointed out these three items represent uncontrollable increases of nearly $400,000 in the county budget.

County Executive Kellogg stated he was doing his paring now, and said he had already subtracted about $20,000 of requested expenditures.

The board has been considering the tentative budget all this week.

Passing of Pioneer Resident

Mrs. May G. Imsick of Goethe street passed away in the Alemany Hospital, aSturday, August 11, following a long illness.

Mrs. Imsick had resided in Daly City for the past twenty years.

She is survived by her husband, Frank Imsick, and two children, Dorothy and Virginia Imsick.

Other surviving relatives are her mother, Mrs. F. Powers, Margaret, Robert and Herbert Powers of New York, and Mrs. F. Jones of San Francisco.

Funeral services were conducted at the Lasswell mortuary chapel at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

Mrs. Taylor Buried

Funeral services were conducted in San Jose, Monday, for Mrs. Florence N. Taylor, who died Saturday in South San Francisco.

Deceased, a native of Mayville, Wis., is survived by her husband, E. E. Taylor of San Jose ,two daughters, Mrs. E. B. Smith and Mrs. E. I. Bartlett, and two sons, Harold A. and E. W. Taylor, all residents of South San Francisco.

Mrs. Bartlett is Junior Past President of the Seventh District of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers and has the sincere sympathy of her many Daly City friends.

COME UP AND HAVE DINNER BUT BRING YOUR OWN DUCKS

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lewis of 352 Winchester street visited Mr. and Mrs. Al Nelson of Oakland over the last weekend. They enjoyed a toothsome duck dinner at the home of their friends.

The Lewises, however, furnished the ducks for the feast, having raised them in their back yard from ducklings, and it is said they were still very tender.

Mr. and Mrs. Duck had been earning their board and keep by eating up all the snails and bugs. In fact, they were so busy they worked themselves out of a job when there were no more of these duck delicacies to be had. As idleness breeds mischief, the ducks began devouring the pretty flowers and foliage, so there was nothing left but to eleminate the quackers.

FAREWELL PARTY FOR VISITORS GOING EAST

Mrs. Leo Escloses of Mission street. San Francisco, entertained a large gathering of friends, Wednesday evening of last week, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Continolo of Evergreen avenue at a farewell party.

Mrs. Escloses and her mother, Mrs. F. Continolo, and her sister, Miss Angelina Continolo, left Friday morning of last week for New York, where they contemplate visiting with relatives for two months. On their trip east they will stop off at Chicago for two days for a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition.

A delightful evening was spent in dancing, after which a buffet luncheon was served to the following guests:

Mr. and Mrs. F. Continolo, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Callan Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Leo Escloses, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Augustien, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Medley of Burlingame, Mrs. Mary Hartje, Mrs. D. Warren, Mrs. C. Canales, Mrs. Dolly Ligouri, Miss Helena Bose, Miss Muriel J. Corbett, Miss Rita Corish, Miss Margaret Warren, Miss Pauline Nittel, Miss Marie De Witt, Miss Myrtle Augustien, Miss Jessie Augustien, Miss Margaret Continolo, Miss Daisy Cattaneo, Miss Margaret Sharp, Miss Angelina Continolo, Miss Agnes Fraser, Miss Ruth Stubbles, Gracia Continolo, Roselia Continolo, Officer Wallace Young, Ed Domenici, James Brooks, Dante Gianni, Frank Continolo, Charles Bell, Charles Augustein Clifford Sousa, Tony Garguilo, Donald Pollio, John Bennett, Bennie McKell, Robert Callan, Alanado Sereni Nate Pearlman and Marino Sereni.

Farewell to Visitor

Miss Lois Stewart entertained at a farewell party recently for Miss Dolly Mulligan of Portland, Ore.

Miss Mulligan has been spending the past eight weeks as guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Norton Townsend of Oliver street.

Those present were Misses Marjorie McCune, Dolly Mulligan, Virginia Sand, Lois Stewart, Iris, Frances and Winifred Winn; Messrs. Bob Foss, Elmer Hartzler, Perry Neff. Kurt Scheel, Harry Turner, Bernard Winn and Bert Woodard.

Games were enjoyed by the group present, after which refreshments were served.

Death of Old Resident

Mrs. Theresa G. Kasser, aged 61, of 6237 Mission street, passed away Sunday.

She is survived by her husband, Herman Kasser, and nine children—Mrs. Sadie Carman, Mrs. Goldie Offenbach, Mrs. Hilda McManus, Mrs. Gertrude Spiro, Mrs. Ethel George, and Joseph, Mervyn, Edward and Helen Kasser.

Mr. and Mrs. Kasser came to Daly City to reside many years ago and reared all their children here.

Mr. Kasser has conducted a realty business in this community for many years and the family has a wide circle of friends who mourn with them in the passing of the wife and mother.

Funeral was conducted from a San Francisco mortuary at 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning of this week.

HARBOR PROJECT BOOST PAYROLLS

assume that what highways have done for residential population, development of our natural waterway will do for our industrial lands."

That industry is looking for such land is emphasized by F. T. Letchfield, industrial expert and SanFrancisco banker, who declares: "While San Francisco bay contains 420 square miles of open water and is regarded as the world's finest landlocked harbor, there are few points where industry can locate and be aforded deep water facilities."

H. W. Crozier, consulting engineer on the Sunnyvale base fight and who aided the Monteray Breakwater case, says: "Traffic estimates indicate there are immediately available for Redwood Harbor 250,000 tons, valued at $7,500,000 yearly, upon which a saving of $100,000 could be effected. This traffic is ready to move to the sea at the county harbor as soon as a wharf and channel are available."

Newspaper comments on the harbor have all been favorable.

The San Mateo Times declares "the harbor will not be a burden. It will be an asset. It will pay us dividends immediately in employment, and later in cash income and development."

The Burlingame Advance-Star sees a convincing argument for the port in San Jose's failure to proceed with its harbor. "With San Jose promising a large volume of business to the Redwood Harbor if it is constructed, the project is looking brighter."

"Port development," says the Redwood City Tribune, "will mean new jobs and new payrolls which will give the workingman the wherewithal to pay his taxes, feed his family and keep up his right to a decent living."

Speaking of the practicability of the port, the South San Francisco Enterprise says: "The Redwood Harbor project is a sound, business-like proposition which will pay untold dividends. It will repay its costs many times over in industrial development."

The Menlo Park Recorder sees immediate benefits in the harbor, declaring: "With shipping facilities at hand, there is no reason in the world why Menlo Park should not take on new life."

"Assurance is given by traffic experts, "says the Palo Alto Times, 'that the port will be self-sustaining and that earnings will meet the interest and liquidate the bonds; and that the industries, payrolls, increased and values and lower taxes which the development promises."

Crocker P. T. A. Holds First Regular Meeting

The first meeting of the term of Crocker P. T. A. was held at the General Pershing School Tuesday afternoon. The new president, Mrs. Nora Clifton, presided. There was a good attendance for a first meeting.

The president appointed her committees and some of the new members promise to take an active part in the activities of the Unit the coming year. Some chairmen appointed: Recreation, Mrs. Eason; Founders' Day, Mrs. Walker; Publicity, Mrs. Pauw; Magazine and Emblem, Mrs. Howe; Hospitality, Mrs. Wegener.

An afternoon whist was announced for Thursday, August 23, at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Clifton, 147 Winchester street. Every member of this Unit is asked to come and bring at least one other. All friends of the Unit are invited.

All mothers of new students in Crocker School are invited to join our Unit at our next meeting, the second Tuesday of September at General Pershing School. Come and get acquainted with us and enjoy the "friendly hour" at the refreshment table.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

(By G. J. H.)

The annual convention of the American Legion Auxiliary has just closed a very successful session in San Francisco. Mrs. Carrie T. Baade of Napa Unit No. 113 was elected President of the Department of California. Melba Gardner was elected Vice President and Ethel Flynn was elected Secretary-Treasurer.

At the installation of the Department officers, Mrs. Catherine Foreman of Daly City Unit was installed as President of the Eighth District. We are proud that our Unit has a member in this office.

The Fidac Doll, made by Mrs. Margaret Orr of Daly City Unit No. 410, won second prize in the Department. Robert T. McColley Unit No. 87 won first prize.

The next convention will be held in Fresno.

The delegates from Daly City Unit were Marcia Trier, June Craft and Catherine Foreman. A number of the members attended the sessions. Our colors and a large delegation participated in the parade on Monday.

On last Friday evening a large delegation attended the meeting of the San Mateo County Council of the American Legion Auxiliary, held in San Bruno Legion Hall. The County Council Drill Team put on an exhibition drill, appearing in their natty new uniforms for the first time. The girls received grand applause.

Early Monday morning the team appeared at the Stadium near the Opera House in San Francisco to compete in the Department Drill Teams contest. The team won sixth place in the competition. We feel proud for receiving so high a rating, as the team has been drilling but six months and we had the largest drill team on the field. Much credit is due our Drillmaster, Comrade R. F. Craft of Daly City Post No. 410, who has worked very hard drilling this team. At the County Council meeting, Comrade Craft was presented with a beautiful gift as a token of appreciation for his untiring services. The team participated in the parade Monday.

The next County Council meeting will be held in Daly City Legion Hall on Friday evening, September 14. The officers for the coming year will be nominated and elected at that time. Be sure to attend. On September 10 the drill team will participate in a parade in San Bruno.

The regular meeting of Daly City Unit will be held next Tuesday evening, August 21, as the regular meeting date came during the convention. Every member is urged to attend, so we may give Catherine our fullest support as she starts her year's work as District President.

RAY RILEY BOOSTED BY THE STATE PRESS

The following editorial comments are clipped from the state press, in support of Ray L. Riley's candidacy for state controller at the August 28 primary:

"For Democrats and Republicans."—Red Bluff Daily News and Times-Sentinel.

"It would be a distinct misfortune were any situation to develop that might endanger Mr. Riley's return to this highly important office."—The Humboldt Standard.

"Riley is one of the state's foremost officials. He is a zealous guardian of the state's funds and is a recognized authority on financial matters. He is conscientious and level-headed."—The Register, Napa, Cal.

"He has shown in no uncertain fashion during his long service to California that he is far above control by any other branches or persons in state government, a fact for which all taxpayers may be truly grateful to him. He has demonstrated consistently that he values to the utmost the trust put in him and has never compromised his or the state's integrity for any person or group."—The Stockton Independent.

"No man is better qualified for the job than the man who has guided the destiny of that department during the past few trying years."—The Bulletin, Huntington Park.—Adv.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wagers of 15 Bruno avenue are receiving congratulations of friends on the arrival of a daughter, born at St. Luke's Hospital on August 10. AMERICAN LEGION NOTES OF INTEREST

(By L. M. Hill)

At the sixteenth annual convention of the Department of California, American Legion, held in San Francisco August 13, 14 and 15, Comrade Archie Closson of Lodi Post No. 22 was elected Department commander for the coming year. One of the high lights of the convention was the visit of the National Commander, Edward A. Hayes. He gave a very inspiring address on Americanism and the American Legion's stand on communism. He also praised the state of California for its work in unemployment relief.

Frank Belgrano of Galileo Post No. 236, Past Department Commander, was endorsed for National Commander.

The song, "Hail to You Legion Men," written by Allen Harding, Commander of San Mateo Post No. 82, was unanimously adopted as the official Department Legion Song.

The most colorful parade ever held in San Francisco was the one Monday morning. The float entered by Daly City Post No. 410, "The Post That Don't Walk," was one of the main attractions of the parade; our map of the Peninsula demonstrated clearly that Daly City "is on the map." Doc and his Haywire Orchestra entertained along the entire line of march.

Fresno was chosen for the next convention city.

Following the elections, Past Department Commander Homer Chaillaux installed the newly elected Department, Area and District officers. Department Commander Archie Closson presented Past Commander Caillaux his Past Department Commander's badge and the Department colors under which he served as Department Commander.

Comrade James K. Fiske was appointed to serve as the Department Adjutant for the twelfth consecutive year.

Daly City Post No. 410 wishes to congratulate our Unit for the honor of having one of its members elected to the office of District President. To District President Catherine Foreman we extend our best wishes for a successful year and offer to her any assistance we can give.

All members are requested to be at the Legion Hall next Sunday at 2 p. m. for baseball practice. While we know we have the best ball team, we still have to play another game with Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, to prove it to them. That cup belongs in our club rooms.

Daly City Post No. 410 will resume its regular monthly dances with a Candidates' Ball, to be given in Legion Hall, 474 San Diego street, Saturday evening, August 25. Music by Doc and his Haywire Orchestra. In giving this dance, Daly City Post No. 410 is non-political, but desires to give the voters of Daly City an opportunity to personally meet all candidates in the primary election. All candidates for office are invited to be present.

Don't forget the next regular Post meeting, Wednesday evening, August 22, at 8:30 p. m.
